

"THE" ALLEN'S MIND FAILING.

Hunted Life of the Pool Room King Is Beginning to Tell Upon His Reason.

MAY GO TO SANITARIUM.

Dubbed by the Police as "Wickedest Man in New York," Allen Is Known as Unpretentious Philanthropist.

"The" Allen, within a year of seventy, broken in health, pursued by the police until his mind is in a whirl and is no longer under control, may be removed from his country home at Bayport, L. I., to a sanitarium.

Allen, who is one of the best known men in New York through the number of times he has been arrested for conducting pool-rooms, has lived two lives. In this city he was familiarly called the "Pool-Room King," and the police labelled him "the wickedest man in New York." Up to a year ago he had been arrested sixty-eight times, of which he had a record. Since then, however, in the wave of the reformers he was arrested and his place raised so often that he lost count and can only guess now at the number. Every police inspector in the city and half the captains, with a half-dozen strict-attorneys, have tried to discourage "The" Allen and have raided his pool-room in Sixth avenue. But not once was he convicted. His craftiness always supplied him an adequate defense.

Charitable Side of Allen.

At Bayport Allen has lived his other and more attractive life. Since his illness he has insisted that his wife, to whom he was always greatly attached, accompany him, even from room to room. To the villagers he has always been known as Mr. Allen. He has, for fifty years, been giving money away, paying poor people's rent, feeding the hungry and paying the coal bills of the poor in the winter. He and his wife have adopted four foundlings as their own children during their wedded life. These foundlings are now men and women and "The" Allen is a grandfather.

If "The" Allen was an outlaw and kept a pool-room the people of Bayport never spoke of it. They knew Allen only as a good man and they have respected him.

When Allen would come into the city, the morning he would become the anxious and worried offender who was trying to dodge the police, who conducted a shady business and took money from the very poor and the very rich alike. But most of it was poor money.

Business of Whispers.

While in the city he was constantly behind a locked and barred door with the blinds drawn and his business was conducted in whispers more than in the open. Now and then he was forced to the ignominy of a ride in the patrol wagon. When he journeyed to Bayport each evening he became the respectable citizen. No longer hunted by the police he stopped and petted and chatted with little children. He was always in the train. Prominent men of the village greeted him and the women would acknowledge his courtly bow.

It is said now that his mind is weakening and that unless a change comes soon he will have to be transferred to an asylum or sanitarium.

DEVERY COMPLETES GOODWIN'S DISTRESS

To-Night the Big Chief Names Himself for Assembly, Hoping to Squelch His Enemy for All Time.

Elated with his complete routing of the Goodwin forces in all the counties, which could be reviewed by the courts, and in the unofficial primary in the Ninth Assembly District for delegates to the Eighth Judicial District Convention, where his ticket polled 468 to 0, William S. Devery will complete the humiliation of his foe by nominating himself for the Assembly at to-night's convention.

Mr. Devery also has a candidate for the vacancy made by the death of Municipal Justice Joseph Blum, of the Eighth Judicial District. Louis Lowenstein is the man, and Devery's followers say he must be nominated, or there will be the chance to pay for the rest of the Tammany ticket. There is an unexpired term of seven and a half years at $6,000 a year at stake, and Devery wants it for his nephew. Stiner was from the Eleventh Assembly District, and according to the unwritten law of Tammany, William Dalton, leader of the Eleventh, has the naming of his successor, and James McLaughlin, a cousin of Police Inspector William McLaughlin, is slated for the place.

FIRST MARRIAGE REGULAR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The intimation that Archbishop Chapelle, of New Orleans, has been called to Rome in connection with the Rosapilosa case is denied at the Apostolic Delegation here. The Archbishop goes on business as Apostolic Delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico.

Prince Rosapilosa's application to have his marriage to Mrs. Parkhurst made regular has been refused. The case is denied at the Apostolic Delegation here. The Archbishop goes on business as Apostolic Delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico.

The Apostolic Delegation examined into this phase and it is stated that the marriage was correct and canonical, the disposition being the Rosapilosa case is denied at the Apostolic Delegation here. The Archbishop goes on business as Apostolic Delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico.

AHEARN'S DEFEAT WORRIES MURPHY

Turning Down the Senator in the Tenth by Foley and Finn a Menace to Tammany.

The rift in the lute which caused the first discordant note in the sweet song of harmony in the new Tammany under the careful tutelage of "Silent Charlie" Murphy—the swift turning down of Senator John Francis Ahearn in the Tenth by "Smiling Tom" Foley, and "Battery Dan" Finn in the saddle in the Second and First Assembly Districts, is causing no end of trouble in Fourteenth street.

Ahearn's friends are insisting that he shall run as an independent, and the Republican endorsement is promised him. His election district captains and the members of his club urged him to run at a meeting called by himself to learn their views, and Col. Michael C. Murphy, who was beaten for the leadership in the First by Judge Finn, says he cannot tell what he will do in the matter until he has called his slickery club together and the club has taken action.

The "Paddy" Divvertes, out two years in the Second, are eager for Ahearn to run as an independent, so they can have a chance to "make Tom Foley look like thirty cents." "Now, Ahearn forced his way into Tammany ten years ago by beating Senator Grady for re-election, running as an independent; Col. Murphy has been president of the Hickory Club nineteen years, and it was the strongest organization in the old County Democratic Party. Murphy is a man of thousands, and should Ahearn run it would probably result in the loss to Tammany of what would be a sure Senatorial district in a time of peace."

Leader Murphy is straining every nerve to bring about peace, but thus far with poor success. Foley is obstinate. He insists on running his protégé, ex-Congressman Daniel J. Flordan, and Judge Finn says, "What's the good of fighting and winning if you can't eat the fruits of victory?"

WORKING HARD FOR PLACE ON BALLOT.

Agents of the Greater New York Democracy Hustling for the Signatures to Insure Party Recognition.

The Greater New York Democracy has endorsed the Democratic State ticket, and twenty-five hustlers are scurrying over the State gathering the fifty signatures in each of the sixty-one counties necessary to a valid petition for the nomination of an independent State ticket, in order that they may have a separate column on the official ballot.

They will nominate a local ticket of their own, probably made up from the candidates on the Republican and Tammany tickets. The local officers to be voted for are the three Justices of the Supreme Court, and it is probable that the Greater New York Democracy will endorse Justice Alfred Stockler and two of the Tammany nominees.

The object of having a separate column on the ballot is to make it possible for the party to demonstrate its strength so that it may secure recognition as a living political party next year, with the right to nominate a State and County ticket just as the old parties do. To entitle the Greater New York Democracy to such recognition it must poll one per cent. of the total vote, or about 13,000 in the State, of which about 5,000 must be polled in the city.
